The Bachelor of Arts in Hospitality Management is designed to prepare students for entry-to-mid management positions in global hospitality workplaces. Core courses diversify the student's skill sets in a variety of hospitality organizational and managerial issues.

There are 3 concentration areas: Food service and restaurant management; Lodging operations; and Travel and tourism management. Students in this degree typically have an interest in owning or managing a restaurant, lodging facility, or a destination marketing organization.

The degree is open to all students and is designed to provide a foundation of research, critical thinking and writing skills that could be useful in further study and professional work.
